NO, WE are not going to say that we have better shoes than anybody else, because we haven't. There are a number of dealers that have just as good.

The advantage you get here is the certainty of as good shoes as the money you pay can buy; for you get the truth about them — just what they are and just how they are made. You get them for what they cost us plus an honest profit, and if they don't prove satisfactory you get your money back.

To how many shoe stores can you go and get satisfaction if you are dissatisfied? Or if you get it, through what a sea of vexations and petty annoyances must you wade before you get it.

If you are dissatisfied here, we make you Judge and Jury; we give you your money back without a question.

FOOT-NOTES:

We have visited the shops of the several first-rate shoemakers and have found that, with a singular unanimity, one and all were producing the same style of shoe. We further found that there is not a single ready-made dealer who has been or is producing this style; so we, who are ready-made dealers, have chosen it.

There's nothing radical about it, nothing patent about it; it's not a cure for misshapen feet; it's merely a gentleman's shoe—good form, in both sense of shape and the meaning of style. It is a shoe that these first-rate shoemakers sell for $10, $12, and $14; we charge but $5.00, and not one of you can tell the difference, either when first putting it on or when taking it off to throw away.

We have christened this shoe the "Model," because we couldn't think of any better name to call it, and we have made it in all the various leathers and in all the various styles.

Of course we can't expect all of you to agree with us that this is the most stylish of shoes; therefore we have ready all the other good styles, from the comparatively narrow toe to the decidedly broad.

THERE ARE in America perhaps four makers of men's hats that are recognized as fashion-makers. Each season each of them produces a Derby and a silk hat—in different sizes, of course, so as to try and accommodate the various sizes of man; but too often the man accommodates himself to the hat rather than the hat accommodates itself to the man, since the hatter from whom he buys offers but one shape.

As far as the quality of material and work go, these several hats are nearly all that is claimed for them, even though one cries, "Second to None"; another shouts, "Unequaled"; a third hollers, "First of All"—while the fact of the matter is, one is as good as the other. If you want to pay $5 for a Derby or $8 for a silk hat, choose the hatter who makes the hat most becoming to you and buy it.

But if you don't want or can't afford to pay those prices, if you are too young or too old to care for a mere name, if the best of material and the best of workmanship are enough — why, we can interest you.

We are imitators.

As soon as the three or four shapes appear, we make exact duplicates — not one, but all; for there is no corner on good felt, no corner on good work, and we buy as good as money can buy.

Being imitators, the hats cost us less; besides we are satisfied with less profit, so we can sell for less.

There you have our story.

Besides hats we have hat-boxes, bags, sticks, umbrellas, traveling-rugs and shawls — only they are in another department. But we don't have English hats, as these three or four hatters have; we think those made in America good enough.

NO LONGER does the sign "Gents' Furnishing Goods" rest in smug self-complacency over the entrance of the better shops that sell neckwear and all the little essentials of men's dress. "Haberdashery," derived from the English "berdash," an old-time neck-dress, fittingly takes its place; and prices have not increased in consequence.

Of peculiar interest is the fact that under the regime of gents' furnishing goods many of the articles sold, such as gloves, neckwear, underwear, nightshirts, and the like, were invariably made to order; but with the better taste of haberdashery has come the common-sense view that most of these things can be got ready-made to the satisfaction of most men. There is but one real exception, and that is the one exception to our ready-made policy, namely, shirts. There is probably no article of wearing apparel about which finicky man is so finicky; and although our stock of shirts is large and complete, and although we sell (so we are told) more ready-made shirts than any other one dealer, we recognize the demand for shirts made to order by making them to order.

One other article is, so to speak, on the fence — collars. But we have all the styles made by two of the most famous collar-manufacturers, and we take our stand firmly by them.

With these two exceptions, we buy the same goods from the same manufacturers as any and all of the exclusive, high-priced sellers of haberdashery in New York City; but besides having the same things that they have, we have what they don't deign to have — good, every-day, sensible articles for the man of small wants or small purse. We sell the same goods for less money than they, of course, and in addition make right anything that may not turn out right.

We feel safe in saying that every kink and quirk of fashion in haberdashery may be found at our stores, or if not found, will be found for you.

IF YOU have fallen into that unfortunate habit of judging by the exterior shell, without so much as a thought for the kernel within the shell; in other words, if a much-bebraided suit causes you to forget that there is cloth beneath the braid — cloth that can change or remain fast in color, cloth that may be properly or improperly cut, cloth that is well or badly sewn; or if the glamor of 98 cents as against an even dollar makes the question of how long a suit will wear one of secondary consideration, don't bother with us, for we can't interest you.

We first of all make our boys' suits right, just as right as our men's suits; then we make them "pretty." For this we charge as little as such sort of work will allow; but, nevertheless, in price we do not pretend to compete with the dealers in "cheap" clothing — we don't want to.

But at any lower prices than ours, no one can compete with us; and no one attempts to compete with us in our willingness to make right whatever may go wrong.

Don't imagine from this that our clothes for boys are foolishly fine or the work needlessly good. They are chosen for and made for boys, with the knowledge that there is no animal so hard on his clothes as a boy, with the realization of how fast boys "shoot up." And knowing all this, we are able to say that we can clothe your boy for less a year than you can clothe him elsewhere—or we'll give you your money back.

Suppose you try.

THE STRIKE OF WILLIE'S CLOTHES

YOUNG Master William Thingum Tite
His parents' patience sorely tried;
They called the boy, as well they might,
"UNTIDINESS PERSONIFIED."

Whene'er he went to bed at night
He never put his clothing by,
But tossed his things to left or right,
And where they fell he let them lie.

Now, clothes when so ill-used as these
Are certain to resent the slight
In course of time—now, listen, please,
What Willie's clothing did one night.

One night, when little William lay
Wrapped in the arms of Morpheus,
His clothes a meeting held, that they
Their sad condition might discuss.

"TAKE CARE of the little feet, and the big feet will take care of themselves," remarks some old wise-acre whose feet probably had not received proper attention. But it's true, nevertheless, that there is no other article of wearing apparel that should have bestowed upon it the thought and care demanded by boys' shoes.

Now, this prelude doesn't mean that we have some hygienic model to foist upon you, some special style of which to sing the praises; we simply believe in shoes for boys that conform as much as possible to the natural foot—as much as possible without losing all sense of good looks and style; we believe in shoes for boys that are strongly enough made to bear, without flinching, the constant rubadubdub of the healthy boy in motion; we believe in shoes for boys that are little enough priced to admit of a growing boy wearing them.

WE TRY to live up to these beliefs; if we fail, or if the shoes we sell fail in the slightest degree, we content ourselves with the knowledge that you are amply protected by our well-known policy of "your money back if you want it."

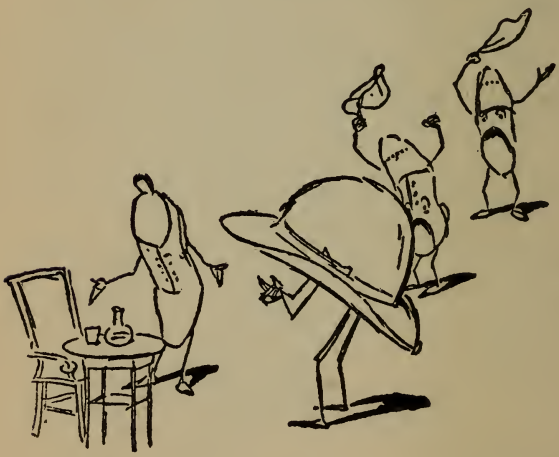
The Roll Call first of all was read,
And when they found that all were there,
Since he came nearest to the head,
To Derby Hat they gave the chair.



*"The Strike of Willie's Clothes" was begun in the Fifth Little Book of "The Works of Rogers Peet & Company."

"My Fellow Garments!" he began,
When every one at last was still,
"Let us put down the tyrant MAN!"
As with one voice they cried, "We WILL!"

"He calls himself Creation's Lord,
But were it not for me and you,
What would he do?" With one accord
The meeting cried, "What COULD he do?"

DAME FASHION doesn't draw the line so closely about boys' hats as about men's, for, being a woman herself, she can feel for the mother who will not buy hats for her boy that make him appear old, lest her own age might be too apparent. What is becoming, what is pretty, is what is sought after.

We have remembered that; but we have not forgotten quality, for it is quality that wins in the final race.

You will undoubtedly have prices quoted that are lower, much lower, than ours; but they will not be for the same quality of hats, remember, because while our stock contains all the various new sorts and styles of hats that boys or boys' mothers could want, other dealers' stocks may contain as many. So the one advantage we offer or intend to offer is: the same as other good dealers at lower prices, or — your money back if you want it.

"How could he go to ball or hop,
Or even walk the avenues?"
"Why, but for us he'd have to stop
At home, of course!" exclaimed the Shoes.

"Supposing, on the street, perhaps,
He met a lady that he knew—
How could he bow?" The Hats and Caps
Shouted in unison, "That's True!"

*"The Strike of Willie's Clothes" was begun in the Fifth Little Book of "The Works of Rogers Peet & Company."

"How could he even offer her
His hand in saying, 'How d'ye do'?
You know to whom I now refer!"
"We Do!" exclaimed the Gloves. "We Do!"

"And what is more, if we were not Good Form," concluded Derby Hat,
"How ever from the common lot
Could he be told?
Now, tell me that!"

YOUR MODERN boy is a boy without a boyhood—he's born a man; he wants to do just what his father does; he wants to wear just what his father wears; and what he wants he usually gets.

Each of our big stores has, grouped in one little store by itself, all the little essentials to boys' dress—man's wearables with the mannishness taken out.

This little store has more care and time bestowed upon it than many another of ten times its size; everything is there, and everything has to do double duty—to be at once manly for the boy and dainty for the mother.

The new things that appear in our men's store are almost invariably, almost immediately, copied for boys; for these two stores go hand in hand as father and son, and, like father and son, each helps the other.

We think that what we sell is right, and we feel that the prices at which we sell are right; but if one or both should prove wrong, we make them right. How? By returning your money or giving you new goods.

Could we do more? Could you ask more? Could you do better than to buy all his little wants at just such a little store?

A Resolution, then, proposed
By Oxford Shoe and seconded
By White Cravat (no one opposed),
Was passed—and this is how it read:

WHEREAS, one William Thingum Tite,
Has shown himself for clothes unfit,
WHEREAS, we, Undersigned, His Clothes,
Are painfully aware of it;

*"The Strike of Willie's Clothes" was begun in the Fifth Little Book of "The Works of Rogers Peet & Company."

WHEREAS, said William never pays
Us the attention that we like;
RESOLVED, unless he mend his ways,
We, Undersigned, His Clothes, WILL STRIKE!

The Resolution, being framed,
And signed and sealed that very night,
A Deputation then was named
To wait on William Thingum Tite.

When William rose next day he wore
A somewhat sad and thoughtful air.
Picking his clothes from off the floor,
He smoothed them out with greatest care.

He never told his Dream at all,
But from that day his parents vied
In praising him; and now they call
Him "TIDINESS PERSONIFIED."

TERMS

WE SEND goods on approval.

To send goods on approval means: Goods are shipped C. O. D., with privilege of examination at the express office; or upon paying charges in full they may be taken home, and if returned to the express office within twenty-four hours, the money will be refunded. In case of a disobliging expressman or in case the goods are kept longer than twenty-four hours, they may be returned directly to us, and on their receipt we will send our check for price of goods and expressage both ways.

You see this means that you can experiment with us, and it need cost you nothing. No matter how far away you live — 1000 miles or more — or how close at hand you may be, it is all the same.

All purchases are delivered free within 100 miles of New York City.

Mail orders to the amount of $20 or over, if fully paid in advance, are delivered free to any point in the United States.

Responsible persons, by giving city references, may remit after receipt of goods, but may not have goods delivered free farther than 100 miles from New York City.

In all other cases we send by express, with bill for collection.

Beyond the 100-mile limit, we do not pay expressage, but pay for return of money on C. O. D. packages.

Parcels weighing four pounds or less may be mailed for one cent an ounce, and registered for eight cents additional. The post-office refuses parcels of more than four pounds.

We send instructions how to take measurements, and all the information you want or that it is in our power to send.

We like to write letters.
